Land Issues in Industrialization and Urbanization

—Taking Brazil as an Example

ZENG Xian-ming

After reviewing historical evolution of land system and urbanization in Brazil, the paper focuses on the relation between land system and industrialization and urbanization and its result. The study shows that Brazil adopted policies of promoting industry and restraining agricultural development in its process of industrialization and urbanization, which led to a series of problems. China should balance the relation between land system and industrialization and urbanization in its process of accelerating its economic development.

A Study of View on Social Development of Post-modernism

XUE Tian-shan

Post-modernism is a kind of western ideas, which formed in 1960s, became popular in 1980s and has a widespread influence until today. Study of its development view is helpful for China to avoid errors western capitalism experienced in its development in building socialism with Chinese characteristics. The paper, from the angle of economic, cultural, political and human development, makes an analysis on post-modernism and hopes we can think about China's modernization from a new view.

Historical Resources and Practical Design of Building Socialist New Countryside

GUAN Xin-hua, WANG Min-yan

The issue about farmers, agriculture and countryside is a basic topic about China's revolution, building and reform. Different development views to the issue lead to various development roads and practical result. In Mao Zedong's times, the main task was to develop heavy industry. In Deng Xiaoping's times, the economic reform made China's economy developing rapidly, but the focus was to solve the problem of food and clothing. In the new period, the issue covers material, spiritual, political and social civilization, requires complete applying scientific outlook on development and coordinate the development between urban and rural areas.

Thinking about Sustainable Development of Non-government-run Economy in China

CHEN Su-fen, LONG Ye-hua

The development of non-government-run economy makes a great contribution to China's social progress and economic development. Complete and correct understanding of the economy in China is helpful for promoting its sustainable development. China's non-government-run economy was formed in a certain background and some bottlenecks exist in its operation, which constraints its sustainable development. To solve the problem is the important path for its sustainable development.

Analysis on American Industrial Workers in the Gilded Age

ZHANG Zhun

The Gilded Age is a key period in the rising of American economy. In the period, American industrial workers were quickly expanded in scale, which promoted the industrial process greatly. On the one hand, the working and living conditions of the workers were very miserable. On the other hand, the conditions were gradually bettered due to workers' struggle. According to the American experience, the industrialization and the rapid economic growth had no direct connection with the improvement of working and living conditions. So in the key period of rising of one country, government must pay attention to social justice and strengthen its regulation.
